What's covered?

Our six-step programme guides you in analysing the audience and the subject matter, right through to producing a professional, high quality finished document that will impress.

Six steps to producing a great document:

1. Analyse the Audience.
2. Determine your Message.
3. Follow Simple Rules for Good Writing.
4. Deliver your Message – Don't Just Report Facts.
5. Edit, Edit, Edit.
6. Have Someone Proofread your Work.

The programme is built around your individual learning needs and features practical exercises to help you hone your skills on the day.

New Course Features:

New Content:

- Writing Rationales using the CER Format.
 - CER: Claim Evidence and Reasoning.
- Interactive exercise on common grammatical errors.
- Using MS Word to avoid common formatting errors.
- Learner-led discussion on the most important learning outcomes for the group.
- Added examples of 'what good looks like'.
- Walk-through of one document from start to finish.

Increased Interaction:

- Additional Interactive Exercises.
- Added Interaction Methods.
- In-class Discussion Groups.

New Course Times:

- Reduced session durations – to maximise learner concentration.
- No late-afternoon learning – to maximise information retention.

New Post Course Follow-up:

- During the course, delegates generate a list of action items which they commit to implementing in order to improve their writing skills. Four weeks after training, all delegates will receive a follow-up self-check survey. This self-check ensures that the learning continues to be put into practice.

Who should participate?

Engineers, Managers, Scientists and other Technical Personnel involved in disciplines such as Quality, Engineering, Regulatory Affairs, Technical Services and Research and Development have all benefitted greatly by attending this course.

English is not my first language; can I do this course?
